There will be a lively time at tomorrow's meeting.

 CHICAGO, July 21.—B. Johnson and Charles B. Smith, both colored, accompanied by a number of ladies of their own race, entered A. C. Houston's beer garden a few nights ago. It would be impossible for a native to reach Matadi and then St. Thomas since that time. The distance between Matadi and Arrivill alone, is a thousand miles through the roughest country.

Injunction Granted.
 NEW YORK, July 21.—Judge Wallace in the United States court today, in the case of the American Bell Telephone Co. against the Globe Co., a restraining order against infringing on the patent granted to Alexander Graham Bell on March 7, 1876, granted permanent injunction asked for by the Bell Telephone Co.

Attempt at Wholesale Poisoning.
 ST. LOUIS, July 21.—A special from Tablequah, L. T. says an attempt was made recently to poison Maj. Lip's family in Cool School district, 60 miles from here. Strichewski was put in the major's spring. One of the children happened to notice the powder floating on the water and called attention to it. The whole neighborhood uses water out of this spring and the result would have been horrible had the trick succeeded.

A Common Mistake.
 Why do so many intelligent persons stubbornly refuse to take any kind of medicine for slight illness, when first taken sick, and when the greatest benefit may be derived from plain simple treatment. Nearly always the first act of a physician when called is to prescribe remedies to move the bowels, to regulate the liver, open the secretions and aid nature. Why? Why? Intelligent persons take the same plain treatment in time themselves, try it and take St. Patrick's pills; they are guaranteed to give satisfaction. They act mildly without griping or irritation, and are thorough in their effect. They are a perfect physic for men, women or children. Sold by Aldrich, Brown & Allen.

What's this?
 "What's this?" says some ten years ago worshipped in Father Zug's barn. The charm of this novel simplicity has given way to the dignity of spacious worshiping places. Then a beautiful grove was the grand rallying point. It was a motley, almost a weird, gathering. Under the heavy spring foliage of those trees brotherly and sisterly greetings were extended the liveliest day. Somber, quiet dresses—no tucks and ruffles—distinguished the women folk. There was a subdued harmony in their pale cheeks and soft looks. Pretty ray faces looked out from beneath white fringed caps and no gross outline of soul was shadowed by the broad brimmed hat. The men embraced each other and imprint the "holly kiss," and likewise the women. Then you could have heard, just as the sun shined his rays from the west, a measured drudgery of song in the words of the Pennsylvanian Dutch dialect come up from Elder Zug's barn.

The love feast was preparing. You look within upon the extended thrashing floor and almost the living counterpart of Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper" is reproduced here. First we witness the rite of feet washing. Men with towels and basins bow before the line of the brethren and women wait upon the sisters. Around a rude table sit the quietly demure participants. The bishop, or housekeeper, has by his side the ministers of the first or second degree; but as the bishop of one measurement make a solid phylax, it is the Dunsen's psalmist—a song, a prayer, a discourse, the kiss and then the mutton soup and bread. It is really a love feast, and that "holly kiss," however sacredly applied here, partakes of a yet ludicrous awkwardness in its execution. The heavy hands of the phylax of toll are grasped in angled curves; the broad brims of those hats meet and bend to an upward pressure, and the religious kiss, in unabated boldness, sounds its praises upon the air. The faint hair lights flicker and the Lord's Supper begins. It is a supper with them, so it is night. "This is my body," "this is my blood," are the words solemnly spoken.

The mode of the love feast has changed but little from that primitive style. The Heidelberg meeting house has, however, introduced the importance of such a gathering. Visitors from great distances in the west and other parts are here. At meal hours the basement, with its stoves and baking houses, is a busy scene. A free table bids welcome to all visitors. A half loaf of bread is placed before every six or ten guests; each one must cut his own slice. Cold meats and pre-arranged plates of "mutton pie," along with coffee-drunk out of yellow bowls and filled from springing cans, make up the bill of fare. The affecting refinement of the world's table etiquette is disdainfully ignored here. Beds in the garret are improvised for the distant visitors. A high board partition is run through the middle part, making separate apartments for male and female sleepers. The beds are simply straw strewn on the floor, with bundles of straw for pillows and such blankets and coverlets as the near friends had provided.

The addresses upon the occasion are as much the culminating and exciting climax of the meeting as any oratorical effort made to a great political convention.—Berk County Co. Philadelphia Times.
